Get Wet and Wrinkly

The purpose of my project was to see what type of water would make my skin wrinkle the fastest. My procedure was to fill up a water bottle that held 1 liter of tap water and put it into the large bowl. Next I would check the temperature. Then I added anything that I needed in the water and stirred it around. After that I would put my hand in the water for five minutes. When 5 minutes passed by I observed my hand and took pictures. When my hand was out for 1 minute, I put it back in the water, but this time for 10 minutes. After 10 minutes I took out my hand again and observed it while taking pictures. I put my hand in for the last time for 15 minutes after I let it set out for 1 minute. Last when 15 minutes passed I took out my hand, took some pictures and then washed out the large bowl. I repeated these steps with salt water and Clorox water. I found that Clorox water made my skin wrinkle the fastest out of all three types of water. Salt water was the water that caused my skin to wrinkle the next fastest. Tap water came in last place. This project is important to society because we use water every day like for example cleaning, bathing or showering, and other life activities.
