

Hailey Alber
To Speak or Not to Speak

This project is a present form of how babies react to verbal communication and sign language. There was success in this project. The baby that was treated with verbal communication and sign language was able to react and eventually communicate earlier and more expressively with her mother. The baby that was only treated with verbal communication took longer to react and communicate back to her mother. This project explained that babies learn and communicate faster when mothers communicate both verbally and with sign language.